

Spelling List 5

transfer: to move up or carry from one place or person to another suffer: to bear up under pain infer: to arrive at a conclusion by reasoning reference: a specific mention of conifer: a cone-bearing tree defer: to submit to another's wishes referee: one carrying the final authority in a game

Lucifer: "light bearing" fallen rebel archangel; the devil fertile: bearing fruit in great quantities monotone: having one pitch monogram: a single design made up of a person's initials monotony: a lack of variety; sameness monologue: a speaking performance by one person monopoly: the control of many businesses by one company monarchy: a nation governed by a king or queen visible: able to be seen accessible: able to be reached or gotten to audible: able to be heard corruptible: able to be ruined or spoiled responsible: able to be trusted; reliable digestible: able to be taken into the body's system sensible: able to use good judgment possible: able to exist, occur, be done convertible: able to be changed into something else credible: can be believed terrible: able to cause terror; awful; horrible edible: can be eaten considerable: notable; important in size or worth durable: lasting; not easily broken capable: having ability; skillful manageable: easy to guide or control; cooperative portable: able to be moved from place to place remarkable: unusual or extraordinary reliable: trustworthy; able to be counted on noticeable: likely to attract attention